 Hounslow Richard, carrier to Aylesbury every Saturday, and to Leighton every Tuesday.

WINSLOW.

A small market town in Cottesloe Hundred, 48½ miles north-west from London, on the same road last mentioned, from Uxbridge to Buckingham, 10½ north-west from Aylesbury, and 6¼ south-east of Buckingham, is also 18½ from the Tring Station of the Birmingham Railroad. It is a vicarage, valued at 185*l.* a year, in the presentation of the Crown; containing 1290 inhabitants. By the Poor Law Commissioners, it is constituted the centre of a union, comprising 17 parishes. It has a Thursday's market, and five fairs annually, the 20th of March, Holy Thursday, 21st of August, 22nd of September, and Thursday before the 11th of October. The town stands on the brow of a hill, overlooking a fertile vale, and is of very remote antiquity, said to have been given by King Offa to St. Alban's Abbey. The houses are of brick, &c., neat, disposed in three principal streets. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a large and venerable edifice, with a square embrasured tower. The inhabitants are chiefly agriculturists and lacemakers; opium has been recently cultivated. There is a small free-school. Middle Claydon house is in the valley, about four miles distant.

WOOBURN.

THE parish of WOOBURN contains 2850 acres; assessed to the Property Tax in 1815 at 4923*l.*; the population was returned in 1831 at 1972. The benefice was returned in 1834 as a vicarage, of the annual value of 138*l.*, in the presentation and impropriation of J. Dupre, Esq. The village is three miles S. W. of Beaconsfield, on the banks of the Wycombe stream, about a mile above its entrance into the Thames. Several mills at Wycombe, on the stream, are in this parish. There are two annual fairs, on the 4th of May and 12th of Nov. The Bishops of Lincoln had formerly a palace here. Wooburn is included in the parochial union of Wycombe.
